

Chapter Title: Notes on Contributors

Book Title: Development As A Battlefield

Book Editor(s): Irene Bono, Béatrice Hibou

Published by: Brill. (2017)

Stable URL: <https://www.jstor.org/stable/10.1163/j.ctt1w8h2fv.7>

JSTOR is a not-for-profit service that helps scholars, researchers, and students discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content in a trusted digital archive. We use information technology and tools to increase productivity and facilitate new forms of scholarship. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

Your use of the JSTOR archive indicates your acceptance of the Terms & Conditions of Use, available at <https://about.jstor.org/terms>

This book is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial 4.0 International License (CC BY-NC 4.0). To view a copy of this license, visit <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc/4.0/>.

Brill is collaborating with JSTOR to digitize, preserve and extend access to Development As A Battlefield

Notes on Contributors

Fariba Adelhkhah

is an anthropologist and director of research at the Fondation nationale des sciences politiques (SciencesPo-CERI) in Paris, France. She is the author of Being Modern in Iran (Hurst, 1999) and Les Mille et une frontières de l'Iran. Quand les voyages forment la nation (Karthala, 2012), and edited the special issue of the Revue d'études du monde musulman et de la Méditerranée on 'Guerres et terres en Afghanistan' (2013).

Yasmine Berriane

is a senior researcher and lecturer at the University of Zurich. She received her doctorate in Political Sociology from the Institute of Political Studies in Paris. Author of Femmes, associations et politique à Casablanca (Editions du Centre Jacques Berque, 2013), she is currently conducting research on social and political change and the commodification of land in Morocco.

Irene Bono

is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Torino, Italy. She is also research associate at the Mohamed VI Polytechnic University in Rabat, Morocco. Her research interests focus on the government of inequality and the role of non-institutional actors in the formation and transformation of the state.

Ayşe Buğra

is Professor of Political Economy at the Atatürk Institute for Modern Turkish History in Istanbul, Turkey. She has written on the history and methodology of economics, development economics and comparative social policy. She is also the translator into Turkish of The Great Transformation by Karl Polanyi (1986).

Raphaëlle Chevillon-Guibert is a research fellow in political economy at the French National Institute for Sustainable Development (IRD), and at the PRODIG Joint Research Unit in Paris, France. For more than ten years, she has investigated patterns of Islamist hegemony in Sudan.

Anouck Gabriela Côte-réal Pinto is a post-doctoral researcher at the School for Advanced Studies in the Social Sciences (EHESS, Paris), seconded to the French Institute of Anatolian Studies (IFEA) in Istanbul, Turkey. Côte-réal Pinto's research interests include the sociological history of the economy, Turkish–European relations and civil–military relations.

Nadia Hachimi Alaoui

is a doctoral student at Sciences Po Aix, France, where she is completing her PhD on the wali and practices of government. She is affiliated to the Centre de Recherche Economie, Société, Culture (CRESC) at the Faculty of Economics and Social Sciences of the University Mohammed VI Polytechnic (Rabat, Morocco) where she is also scientific secretary to the Chair of Comparative African Studies.

Béatrice Hibou

is CNRS Senior Research Fellow at the Centre d'Études et de Recherches Internationales (CERI) in Paris, France. She is co-director of the Centre de Recherche, Économie, Société et Culture, Mohamed VI Polytechnic, University of Rabat, Morocco. Her comparative research in political economy focuses on the political significance of economic reform, state trajectories and the exercise of domination in Africa and Europe, from a Weberian perspective.

Adriana Kemp

is Associate Professor and Chair of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Tel Aviv University, Israel. Her areas of research are citizenship and migration, neoliberal politics and urban governance.

Nora Lafi

is a historian at the Leibniz-Zentrum Moderner Orient in Berlin, Germany. She also teaches at the Free University of Berlin (Faculty of Islamwissenschaft) and the Berlin Graduate School Muslim Cultures and Societies.

Talia Margalit

is Senior Lecturer at the Azrieli School of Architecture, Tel Aviv University, Israel. Her areas of research are urban planning and citizenship, neoliberal policies and urban development. She specialised in Israeli planning and Tel Aviv.

Marie Vannetzel

is a researcher in political sociology at the CNRS in Amiens, France (CURAPP), and a member of the European Research Council-funded programme, 'When Authoritarianism Fails in the Arab World'. She completed her PhD on the local mobilisation of the Muslim Brotherhood in Egypt and currently studies post-2011 electoral dynamics.

Elena Vezzadini

is a research fellow at the Institut des Mondes Africains (IMAF/CNRS) in Paris, France. Her research interests include the social history of the first Sudanese nationalist movement, nationalism and memory, colonialism and the abolition of slavery, and the army up to the 1920s. She is the author of Lost Nationalism: Revolution, Memory and Anti-colonial Resistance in Sudan, published in 2015 (James Currey).

Merieme Yafout

is a visiting professor at the University of Turin, Italy and the University of Lausanne, Switzerland. A specialist on the theme of women, religion and politics, she has conducted academic research in Morocco, Tunisia, Egypt and Italy, and has worked as a researcher for a number of international organisations.