Details:

The Athenian decree in honour of well-known politician Eurykleides, now published as IG 2[3] 1 1160 (Mus.Pir. 1283), comes from outside the city, having been originally set up in Peiraieus. The text preserves part of a wide-ranging recount of the initiatives undertaken by Eurykleides, throughout his entire career (here the Peiraieus is only in part involved). This decree has a significant parallel in the honours for Kephisodoros IG 2[3] 1 1292(200/199 or 184/3 BCE, from the Athenian Agora), ll. 33-34: the People honours him with two bronze statues, to be respectively set up in the Agora and in the commercial area of Peiraieus. Therefore, it can be suggested the hypothesis that the stele set up in Peiraieus was a second copy of the decree, and that a first copy of these honours should have been displayed in the city, and most probably in the Agora, where the decrees for distinguished Athenian citizens were normally displayed.
